Medieval Astrology Profile for Alfred Adler

File History: first version 24-Jan-2014; tables updated 31-May-2016

Introduction to delineation of appearance and character in natal astrology. The following document is a hand-written analysis of Alfred Adler, using the principles of medieval predictive astrology. The discipline of natal astrology focuses on the fate of an individual based on a horoscope cast for the moment of birth. Within natal astrology, the 1st house occupying the eastern horizon at birth describes the native: physical vitality, appearance, and character. Between the Hellenistic and Medieval eras several specialized models were developed to assess these characteristics. They include longevity (vitality and length of life), physiognomy (form and shape of the face and body), victor of the chart (overall life purpose), manners (social conduct including ethical behavior), and temperament (elemental mix of fire, earth, air, and water with applications in medical astrology). Prior research has presented models and results for longevity (A Rectification Manual: The American Presidency, Chapter 4) and physiognomy (Astrological Physiognomy: History and Sources & Astrological Physiognomy: Empirical Tests of the Leo Rising Decan).

Victor of the Chart. Included are two competing models for computing the victor of the chart said to be the single most powerful planet in the horoscope. According to Plato's follower Porphyry, the planet signifying the victor of the chart by configuration in the natal horoscope shows the life choice made by the soul prior to incarnation. Plato explains the details of his soul model in The Myth of Er found in the closing pages of The Republic. Porphyry and his peer Antiochus offer specific rules for determining the victor of the chart. The method of Antiochus/Porphyry is compared to a later method for determining the victor suggested by the Jewish Rabbi Abraham ben Meir ibn Ezra, a philosopher and astrologer active in the 12th century. For a discussion of these two models, see the companion paper Victor of the Chart: Testing Methods of Antiochus/Porphyry and Ibn Ezra, which serves as a key to what is presented here.

Manners. Plato was not alone among Greek philosophers in conceiving models for the soul. Aristotle's model of vegetative, sensitive, and intellective soul levels (assigned respectively to the plant, animal, and human kingdoms) was taken up by Ptolemy, who found a correspondence between the sensitive and intellective soul and Moon and Mercury in the natal horoscope. The configuration of the Moon and Mercury, with special emphasis given to their rulers, is a second method for analyzing the soul. Ptolemy introduces this model in Tetrabiblos III.13 "Of the Quality of the Soul." Subsequent authors refer to this model as the "Significators of the Soul" or "Manners." A summary template for the Moon and Mercury is presented in the paper and will be developed further in future versions.

Alfred Adler (February 7, 1870 - May 28, 1937)

Together with Sigmund Freud and Carl Jung, Alfred Adler is recognized as one of the three founders of the psychoanalytic movement in the early 20th century. Best known for his theory that an individual's inferiority complex establishes an internal drive to compensate for deficiencies, Adler was also a dedicated socialist who believed that personal integration into society was a necessary goal for success on an individual level. His theories were introduced into Vienna's educational system during the 1920s when the Social Democrats held power. Eventually overturned by Fascists, Adler shifted his focus to the United States in his later years where his positive philosophy helped lay the groundwork for humanistic psychology later in the 20th century.

After nearly dying from pneumonia at the age of 5, Alfred Adler came to this conclusion:
My decision was confirmed. I must become a physician. To this decision, I always remained true[1].

After participating in the gymnasium education system, Adler entered the University of Vienna Medical School in the fall of 1888 and received his medical degree in 1895. With the location of his private practice next to an amusement park and circus, circus performers were frequent clients. In an era where the strong man and various freak shows peppered circus venues, strengths and weaknesses of circus clients proved fodder for Adler's psychological theories. The propensity of circus performers to compensate for inferior or odd physical conditions led Adler to create compensation theory, or how individuals achieved balance in their lives by overcoming physical or mental limitations. The related term "inferiority complex" - originally limited to organic, or physical limitations - is now treated more broadly to include psychological conditions of low self-esteem. Beyond compensation theory, Adler is known for emphasis on the integration of individuals into society as a whole as a necessary condition for psychological health. This professional theme derives from Adler's socialist political bent developed during medical school which reached its heyday during the 1920s when Social Democrats won power in Vienna and implemented Adler's proposed educational reforms in the city.

Adler is famously remembered as one of Freud's original circle dating from Freud's 1902 invitation to Adler to join. Adler split from Freud in 1911 on differences of opinion regarding the role of sexuality in neurosis (Freud's view) or inferiority complexes/power issues (Adler's view). During his twenty-five years on the lecture circuit, Adler was routinely introduced as a student of Freud which infuriated him. He carried with him Freud's original 1902 invitation to attend his Wednesday night meetings as proof that Freud has asked Adler to share his ideas, not the other way around.

With the rise of fascism, Adler left for America and found more lasting popularity among Americans with his positive message which later helped form the basis of humanistic psychology. He also attracted a number of wealthy patrons including Charles Henry Davis who funded a professorship for Adler at the Long Island College of Medicine in 1932. Adler's career was marred by sloppy outsourcing of his later books many of which were rejected by mainstream publishers after initial success. The end of his life was marked by the tragic disappearance of his first daughter Valentine, a socialist activist like his wife Raissa, who disappeared in January 1937 during a Stalin purge. Adler died in May 1937 from a heart attack while on a speaking tour. His daughter's whereabouts and eventual death in a Russian gulag in 1942 were unknown at the time of Adler's passing. Today, Adler's inferiority complex and compensation theory remain mainstays of modern psychology.

Stage I. Determine the Ascendant sign

Moon's Sign

The Moon changes from Aries to Taurus at 3:29 a.m. for the day of birth. Adler's wife, the Russian Raissa Timofeivna Epstein, was a frustrated political activist. As Adler's wife, Raissa had to give up her dream to work for revolutionary activities with Trotsky (with whom the Adler's were close friends) in order to raise four children. Adler's first child, Valentine, would also become a social activist in Russia. Sadly, Valentine was a victim of a Stalin purge following the arrest of Karl Radek in January 1937. Arrested that month, it was later determined that Valentine died in a Russian gulag on July 6, 1942. While her death was not discovered until after Adler's death, distress over his daughter's fate in the Spring of 1937 was likely a contributing factor in Adler's own death in May of the same year.

Moon/Aries is consistent with political activism (compared to the staid Moon/Taurus); however placement in the bound of Saturn/Aries with the Moon separating from Saturn/Sagittarius and void of course adds significant melancholy to the Moon. This configuration is consistent with the life affairs of both Adler's wife Raissa and the unfortunate fate of his daughter Valentine.

The choice of Moon/Aries limits the Ascendant sign to either Scorpio or Sagittarius.

Physiognomy - Configuration of the Chart

Adler was a large man consistent with the influence of fixed signs on his body type. The soft rectangular shape of Willner's facial type - sign model is the best match to Adler's face and suggests Jupiter/Taurus as the primary physiognomy significator. For Jupiter/Taurus to rule the rising decan, either the 2nd decan of Scorpio (Pisces) or the 1st decan of Sagittarius (Sagittarius) are choices.

https://skydrive.live.com/?cid=e7ff4fb363de19fc&id=E7FF4FB363DE19FC!500&sff=1&authkey=!APuI-JNeeLiVKP4

Given Adler's optimistic disposition and philosophy it is difficult to reject a Sagittarius Ascendant. In addition, his primary enemies were anti-intellectual fascists best signified by Mars/Aquarius which rules the 12th if Sagittarius rises. In addition, see that Jupiter/Taurus is placed in the 6th of illness. This is consistent with a life threatening infected carbuncle on his neck in late 1935 which required emergency surgery. Taurus is assigned to the neck and Jupiter/Taurus is consistent with a growth on the neck causing illness. Finally see that Moon/Aries/5th of children rules the 8th. This is consistent with my comment that the disappearance of Adler's daughter Valentine played a role in Adler's death.

Conclusion: Ascendant is Sagittarius

Model Summary
(for model details see www.regulus-astrology.com/research.html)

Physiognomy

Ascendant sign: Sagittarius
Ascendant sign ruler: Jupiter/Taurus
Ascendant decan: Sagittarius
Ascendant decan ruler: Jupiter/Taurus
Planets/Nodes placed in the Ascendant sign or decan: Saturn/Sagittarius placed in 1st

Longevity: 67y 3m 18d

Releaser and kadukhudhāh.

Theory: Figure is nocturnal and Moon is preferred. 5th house placement is acceptable but only if in a feminine sign. Sun placed in the 3rd opposite his house of joy is not allowed. For conjunctional figures, next choice is the Ascendant. Jupiter is the only ruler of the 2nd degree of Sagittarius. He does not aspect the Ascendant so is ruled out. Next is Lot of Fortune whose bound ruler is Jupiter and aspects by trine. Jupiter is occidental, but just past waning square which is a position which holds some power. Jupiter is also in mutual reception with Venus by sign.

Practice: Jupiter rules the ASC by sign & bound, rules the Sun by bound, and rules the Lot of Fortune by bound. Consider the Lot of Fortune as releaser and Jupiter as the kadukhudhāh. Jupiter grants 79 major years. Square by Mars deducts 15 years. Net projection is 64 years or 7-Feb-1934. Adler's most lavish birthday celebration was his 64th. Immediately following his birthday, Fascists took over Austria and eliminated Adler's educational reforms. One year later Adler had a life threatening carbuncle on his neck and two years later he was dead. This technique suggests Adler's functional lifespan was 64.

Victor of the Chart: Jupiter/Taurus

Ibn Ezra's method suggests either Jupiter or Saturn. Porphyrys's Stage II criteria suggests Mercury, Jupiter, or Saturn. Based on life affairs, Saturn is clearly ruled out as the pessimism of Saturn/Sagittarius was not a defining Adlerian feature. Choosing between Mercury and Jupiter, Jupiter is an easy winner with his position just past the waning square, in mutual reception with Venus by sign, and placement in the 6th house of illness which is the acorn which triggers Adler's decision at the age of 5 to become a physician after nearly dying from pneumonia (which is also a Jupiterian disease). He studied to become a doctor during his major Jupiter period with most of his key research findings made during Jupiter subperiods later in life. No question Jupiter/Taurus is Adler's victor.

Manners: Saturn-Jupiter.
