Introduction to delineation of appearance and character in natal astrology. The following document is a hand-written analysis of Richard Nixon made using the principles of Medieval Predictive Astrology. The discipline of natal astrology focuses on the fate of an individual based on a horoscope cast for the moment of birth. Within natal astrology, the 1st house occupying the eastern horizon at birth describes the native: physical vitality, appearance, and character. From the origins of natal astrology in the Hellenistic era to the present day a number of specialized models have been developed to assess these characteristics. They include longevity (vitality and length of life), physiognomy (form and shape of the face and body), temperament (elemental mix of fire, earth, air, and water with applications in medical astrology), manners (social conduct including ethical behavior), and the victor of the chart (overall life purpose). Prior research has presented models and results for longevity (A Rectification Manual: The American Presidency, Chapter 4) and physiognomy (Astrological Physiognomy: History and Sources & Astrological Physiognomy: Empirical Tests of the Leo Rising Decan). The following paper discusses one of forty horoscopes chosen to populate an initial data set for testing competing models for the victor of the chart.

Victor of the chart. The paper tests two competing models for computing the victor of the chart which is the single most powerful planet in the horoscope. According to Plato's follower Porphyry, by configuration in the natal horoscope the victor of the chart shows the life choice made by the soul prior to incarnation. Plato explains the details of his soul model in The Myth of Er found in the closing pages of his work The Republic. Porphyry offers specific rules for determining the victor of the chart which are evaluated in this paper. Porphyry's method is compared to a later method for determining the victor of the chart suggested by the Jewish Rabbi Abraham ben Meir Ibn Izra who was active as a philosopher and astrologer in the 12th century.

Manners. Plato was not alone among Greek philosophers in conceiving models for the soul. Aristotle's model of vegetative, sensitive, and intellective soul levels assigned to the plant, animal, and human kingdoms respectively was taken up by Ptolemy who found a correspondence between the sensitive and intellective soul and Moon and Mercury in the natal horoscope. Configuration of the Moon and Mercury, with special emphasis given to their rulers, is a second method for analyzing the soul. Ptolemy introduces this model in Tetrabiblos III.13 "Of the Quality of the Soul". Subsequent authors refer to this model as "Significators of the Soul" or "Manners". Preliminary results for this model are presented in the paper and will be further developed in future versions.

Richard Nixon (January 9, 1913 – April 22, 1994)

The only US President to resign in office, Richard Nixon remains infamous for his duplicity, furtiveness, and shamelessness revealed by private conversations taped in the White House. These were all characteristics of the private side of Richard Nixon. The other side of Nixon - aggressive, goal oriented, and active – were features kept on display for public consumption. Maintaining both sides proved difficult. Consider during the same period he went to China and engaged in détente with the Soviet Union, Nixon organized the infamous 'plumbers' unit which burglarized the offices of Daniel Ellsberg on September 3, 1971 following publication of the Pentagon Papers on June 13, 1971. The plumbers unit proceeded to install bugging equipment at the Democratic National Committee headquarters at the Watergate complex on May 28, 1972. Compare this chronology to Nixon's July 15, 1971 announcement of his trip to China, his arrival in Beijing on February 21, 1972, and the SALT-1 treaty with the Soviet Union signed on May 26, 1972. Nixon's two greatest achievements – détente with the Russians and the opening of China – occurred simultaneously with actions of the plumbers unit which would ultimately sink his Presidency. Whether Nixon was neurotic, two-faced, or any number of labels proved fodder for a virtual industry of post-mortem psychological analysis.

Richard Nixon was born to Frank and Hannah Nixon who were conservative Quaker parents. In high school years, Richard awoke before sunrise to drive his father's truck into Los Angeles to purchase vegetables; which after returning, washing, and displaying them at his father's grocery store, he left for school. Family time required for care of his oldest brother Harold suffering from tuberculosis meant Richard would stay in town attending Whittier College so he could help run the family store rather than attending Harvard on a tuition grant. At Whittier, Nixon was elected Student Body President his senior year, this two years after he staged a mock coup d'état as a prank where he called a meeting as acting Student Body President and impeached the elected President.

From Whittier, Nixon attended Duke Law and returned to California to practice law. In Whittier, his association with a failed orange juice concentrate venture ("Citra-Frost") and the improper purchase of real estate in a foreclosure auction revealed a lack of business savvy. Like it did for many Americans, WWII bailed out Richard Nixon with a stint at the Office of Price Administration in Washington D.C. prior to military naval service in the South Pacific. Returning to California after the war, Nixon now had political credentials and found financial backing by a group of conservative Republicans known as the 'Committee of 100.' Nixon rose to national power (1946 House race and 1950 Senate race) by taking advantage of American's paranoia of Cold War Communism.

Nixon's role in sensationalizing the Chambers-Hiss communist spy affair of 1948-1950 gave Nixon national standing which he parlayed into the Vice-Presidential slot on the successful Eisenhower Presidential ticket in 1952. Typical for Vice-Presidents, the 1950s were uneventful for Nixon. In fact the most significant political event for the Nixon political chronology of the 1950s was his September 2, 1952 "Checkers" speech which vindicated his secret campaign slush fund disclosed while Nixon was on the campaign trail with Eisenhower. Up to that date in time, the Checkers television audience was the largest witness to a live political speech in recorded history.

Nixon's televised debate appearance against Presidential candidate John F. Kennedy in 1960 proved more challenging. Nixon appeared like a haggard old man on black & white television screens. Those who watched the television debate (in contrast to those who heard Nixon on radio) judged his performance a loss in what has become a classic case study among political media consultants. Thought politically finished after his 1960 loss to Kennedy and a similarly weak performance against incumbent Pat Brown in the 1962 California Gubernatorial race, Nixon surprised pundits by returning and winning the 1968 Presidential race.

Essential to understanding the Nixon Presidency is a parallel study of Henry Kissinger who served Nixon first as National Security Advisor and later as Secretary of State. Kissinger's own penchant for secrecy and back channel diplomacy reinforced Nixon's own paranoia in ways which helped undermine the Nixon Presidency. Kissinger's role in enlarging the Vietnam War to neighboring countries Laos and Cambodia, initially kept secret from Congress and the American public, remain notorious affairs in the annals of the Vietnam War.

After resigning in disgrace on August 9, 1974, Nixon nearly died from phlebitis which required surgery in late 1974. A Presidential pardon from Gerald Ford on September 8, 1974 limited Nixon's legal liabilities. But not until his health improved in the spring of 1975 did Richard Nixon began a slow rise to the role of senior statesman. In an echo of his successful 1952 Checkers television performance, television interviews granted by Nixon to British TV talk-show host and producer David Frost aired during August 1975 garnered Nixon $600,000 and reached an estimated 40-50 million viewers, another record. In February 1976, Nixon visited China at Mao's request (before Mao died in April). In 1978 he was welcomed by Britain's opposition leader Margaret Thatcher and published his well-received memoirs the same year. In 1979, Nixon attended the White House state dinner for Chinese Vice Premier Deng Xiaoping much to the distress of President Carter who only relented once Deng stated he would fly to California to meet Nixon personally unless Nixon was invited to the White House function. Nixon maintained an active speaking and travel schedule during the 1980s. Upon his return from a visit to the Soviet Union in 1986, Nixon was ranked as one of the ten most admired men in the world. Nixon had achieved his political rehabilitation.

Suggested References

Works on Nixon are vast, spurred in part by a curiosity of a seemingly caring political figure marred by a dark side of fear, paranoia, and corruption. In A Rectification Manual, I suggest reading Presidential biographies which stop before the individual reached the national stage in order to avoid the mundane bias of world events which take place during every Presidency. Richard Milhous Nixon: The Rise of an American Politician by Roger Morris (New York: Henry Holt & Company, 1990) qualifies by taking Nixon from birth to his 1952 famous "Checkers" speech made while running for Vice-President on the Eisenhower ticket. For the original ARM study, I paired Morris' biography with Richard Reeves' President Nixon: Alone in the White House (New York: Simon & Schuster, 2001) which focuses on Nixon's Presidency.

Model Summary

(for model details see www.regulus-astrology.com/research.html)

Physiognomy

Ascendant sign: Virgo
Ascendant sign ruler: Mercury/Capricorn
Ascendant decan: Capricorn
Ascendant decan ruler: Saturn/Taurus/rx
Planets/Nodes in sign of rising decan: Mercury, Jupiter, Sun

Nixon's facial shape is the soft rectangular of Taurus in agreement with decan ruler Saturn placed in Taurus. If anything, Saturn/rx exhibits a ricochet effect to the opposite sign as Saturn/Scorpio which as a physiognomy significator is consistent with Nixon's dark eyebrows which contrast sharply from his forehead.

Longevity: 87y 4m 29d

Releaser and kadukhudhāh. Lot of Fortune and Venus.
For full discussion of longevity, see ARM pp. 634-635.

Victor of the Chart: Saturn/Taurus-rx

Ibn Ezra chooses Saturn as victor; expanded Porphyry's criteria suggests Mercury and Venus as two other candidates. What favors Saturn as victor is his whole sign house position 10 signs from the Lot of Fortune which Saturn rules by bound. In addition, Saturn rules by sign and collects the light of both luminaries. These conditions appear sufficient for Saturn to suffice as victor. Note that Porphyry does not consider either sign or bound ruler of the Sun in his initial screening. Nixon is a case which demonstrate the limitation of that omission.

For Nixon, Saturn/Taurus retrograde behaves like Saturn placed in the opposite sign of Scorpio. Saturn/Scorpio is the classic planet/sign combination for fear, paranoia, and security. Saturn/Scorpio is the source of Nixon's neurotic fears which led him to wiretaps, spying, and theft which caused the downfall of his administration.
